

McDonald's China x Intangible Cultural Heritage Inheritors: Craftsmanship Lights Up the Year, "Wish you a Golden Arches year"

2026.01.28

8 Limited-Edition Bites, 7,700 Locations: Ring in the Year of the Horse Together!

(January 28, 2026, Shanghai) With the Year of the Horse approaching, McDonald's China launches its annual "Wish you a Golden Arches year" Lunar New Year campaign. This year, inspired by Intangible Cultural Heritage (ICH) lantern displays, McDonald's China collaborates with multiple ICH inheritors to create four themed lanterns embodying New Year wishes. Guided by One Lantern, One Wish, the brand delivers festive blessings to consumers, offering a Spring Festival experience that blends traditional culture with premium delicacies. From now until March 3, consumers can enjoy a range of limited-edition delicacies at over 7,700 McDonald's restaurants nationwide, including the Golden Arches Ebi Burger, Golden Arches Pineapple Angus Burger, Golden Wings Gathering Honey-Glazed Grilled V-Wings, Lucky Golden Twister Fries, and Golden Luck Rises High Red Bean Rice Cake Flavor Pie. A series of special Spring Festival packaging, inspired by ICH lantern displays, will also be refreshed for a limited time alongside the new products. During the campaign, consumers in Shanghai, Beijing, Fuzhou, Nanjing, and Guangzhou can also join offline pop-up events to experience a limited-time, festive interactive experience in advance. Starting from February 17, the McDonald's x My Little Pony Mini Mahjong Plush Set, specially created for the Year of the Horse Spring Festival, will also be available for sale.

McDonald's China Collaborates with ICH Inheritors to Celebrate the New Year with Craftsmanship and Lantern Light

Bin He, Chief Growth Officer of McDonald's China, said: "McDonald's continues to connect neighborhoods and deepen its roots in local culture through diverse initiatives. Leveraging art forms such as shadow puppetry and intangible cultural heritage lantern displays, 'Wish you a Golden Arches year' has not only become a widely circulated Spring Festival greeting among McDonald's fans but also carries profound significance for cultural inheritance. Through a range of exclusive delicacies, innovative cultural creations, and heartwarming offline experiences, we aim to make reunion, joy, connection, and resonance flow within the 'Golden Arches'."

A delicious start to the New Year, Wish you a Golden Arches year!

The Spring Festival is the most important moment of family reunion for Chinese people, and also a highlight filled with blessings and sincere wishes. McDonald's China is delighted to continue using "Wish you a Golden Arches year" as our exclusive Spring Festival greeting. Through a range of product names infused with the character "Jin" (gold/luck) that carry festive blessings, we aim to deliver good fortune to consumers in more diverse and interesting ways. This marks the third consecutive year that McDonald's China has launched its Spring Festival campaign under the theme of "Wish you a Golden Arches year".

During the campaign, McDonald's China launches 8 limited-edition Spring Festival treats infused with the character "Jin" (gold/luck). These include the "Golden Arches Ebi Burger" made with premium South American white shrimp, the hearty and juicy "Golden Arches Pineapple Angus Burger", the rich and savory "Golden Wings Gathering Honey-Glazed Grilled V-Wings", the soft and sweet "Golden Wealth Rolls In Purple Sweet Potato Balls", the classic New Year treats "Lucky Golden Twister Fries" and "Golden Luck Rises High Red Bean Rice Cake Flavor Pie", as well as the tangy and refreshing "Golden Blessings At Door Pineapple Flavor Sparkling Drink" and "Mango Pomelo Sago Flavored McFlurry".

Every weekend from January 31 to February 8, McDelivery will also launch Chinese New Year benefits. Customers who place orders through Meituan Waimai, Taobao Flash Purchase and other platforms can enjoy free delivery fee discounts upon reaching the minimum order value. During the Spring Festival, McDelivery will remain open 24/7 to deliver delicious McDonald's food to consumers across China anytime, anywhere. Meanwhile, delivery riders will have the chance to redeem a limited-time three-item set meal benefit during the festival, and McDonald's restaurants will continue to provide warm care such as hot water to riders.

To add more fun to the Year of the Horse Spring Festival, McDonald's China will also launch a series of My Little Pony themed merchandise:

- Starting from February 4, customers who purchase a McDonald's Happy Meal will randomly receive one toy from the My Little Pony or Transformers collection.
- Starting from February 10, the McDonald's My Little Pony Mahjong Set will be available for purchase on the McDonald's Official App / Mini-program MaiMai Mall.
- Starting from February 17, the limited-edition My Little Pony Mini Mahjong Plush Set (four styles in total) will be officially launched. Customers can add this set to their cart with a minimum spend at participating restaurants.

Cooperate with a number of intangible cultural heritage lantern masters to celebrate the New Year with exquisite craftsmanship and glowing lanterns.

This year, McDonald's China has partnered with the Beijing Folk Art Intangible Cultural Heritage Research Institute, inviting four national and provincial inheritors of intangible cultural heritage lantern displays. We have integrated elements from four iconic ICH lanterns—the Beijing Palace Lanterns, Foshan Colored Lanterns, Qinhuai River Lanterns, and Anhui Fish Lanterns—into our Lunar New Year visuals, continuing to explore innovative integration of traditional culture and modern catering experiences. McDonald's China has also collaborated with HARPER'S BAZAAR China to launch the themed short film series "One Light, One Wish". Through the lens of inheritors of intangible cultural heritage, the series tells the story of lantern craftsmanship and cultural inheritance, allowing us to celebrate reunion and send blessings amid the colorful glow of lanterns.

Fan Yiqi, Director of the Beijing Folk Art Intangible Cultural Heritage Research Institute, said:

"Lantern displays are a representative carrier of Chinese Spring Festival culture, embodying reunion, wishes, and blessings. We are delighted to partner with McDonald's China, allowing lantern culture to be understood and loved by more young people in new life scenarios. We also look forward to new inspirations and possibilities brought by this collaboration with McDonald's, spreading traditional culture more widely and further."

Come to McDonald's to light up the festive spirit this Spring Festival—go lantern-gazing!

Starting from January 28, the "Wish you a Golden Arches year" Spring Festival pop-up events will kick off in five cities: Shanghai, Beijing, Fuzhou, Guangzhou, and Nanjing. Aligned with each city's characteristic lantern fairs, the events focus on new taste experiences, lantern installations, and creative interactions, creating a Spring Festival experience for consumers that integrates "visiting lantern fairs, admiring lantern displays, and tasting new flavors" in urban areas. Meanwhile, 25 McDonald's restaurants across 14 cities nationwide will transform into Spring Festival flagship stores during the event, featuring themed lantern installations and rich interactive activities. Consumers who check in at these flagship stores will also have the chance to take home Spring Festival gifts such as bookmarks or city-exclusive badges. Additionally, during the Spring Festival, the receipts from self-service ordering machines in all restaurants will be upgraded to a special "One Lantern, One Wish" edition, randomly displaying New Year wishes from consumers, adding an extra touch of warmth and surprise to the Spring Festival experience.
