

Creative Poster Portfolio

Ning Shen (Basitia Shen)

Creative brief

Client

Ayers Rock Resort
<https://www.ayersrockresort.com.au/>

Objective

We are experiencing a drop in spring bookings with Australians tending to choose North Queensland or Pacific island holidays. We want to reverse this trend and increase spring season bookings by 30% this season. Produce an ad concept for a print campaign in newspapers and magazines.

Challenge

Australians most typically think of Uluru/Ayers Rock and the Australian desert as a tourist destination for international visitors – not for domestic visitors. We want them to see the possibilities for an unforgettable mini-break in central Australia.

Target audience

For this campaign we want to target young couples aged 25 to 35 without children, living in the large Australian capital cities. They are professionals who have a good disposable income but lead stressful lives and are looking for a relaxing, extraordinary experience with which to escape this stress, at least temporarily.

Consumer insight

Our target audience is used to living in a big city and has almost never been more than 50Km outside of it. Although they live in a country with amazing and unique natural beauty, most have never really seen it or experienced how different it is from city life. Our guests have told us that the unique combination of openness, isolation, tranquillity, and a vast and unique landscape, but within a resort environment - to comfortably experience it in – is the thing that helps them unwind so well from the pressures of professional city. But in particular, this de-stressing helps them to rediscover the relationship they have with their partner, that their stressful life gets in the way of – even threatens.

Proposition

The holiday to help you remember who and what is really important in life.

Substantiation for the proposition

- It is the complete and total difference of the desert and Uluru environment as well as the luxurious experience of our resort, to the busy lives and responsibilities of young professionals that means even a minibreak can disconnect people from the constant pressures and distractions of city life.
- Our guests consistently tell us the vast, unique landscape and quieter environment around Uluru and within Ayers Rock Resort is what most helps them unwind from bad habits developed in city life to focus on what's important to them – their partner and their personal lives - not just what's important to their jobs and career.
- Our guests consistently tell us that it is this extreme difference in both physical environment and the mental/spiritual experience they have, that helps them to reset their relationships and personal lives so well.

Personality of the brand

Quiet awe that refreshes the spirit.

Mandatories

Print ad format
Voyages Ayers Rock Resort logo

Creative brief

Client

Georgio Armani Si
<https://www.giorgioarmanibeauty.com.au/maestro-beauty-guides/fragrance-guides/which-si-perfume-is-best-for-you.html?srsltid=AfmB0oqj7SoD3kEQKypvPmv0sX4QXvQ3xjrffbfWJltT7KQk8t-z0teD>

Objective

To make Georgio Armani Si the one perfume young professional women wear everywhere – from work to leisure.

Challenge

The perfume market is more crowded than ever and it is difficult for any fragrance brand to be recognised, let alone stand out. At the same time, our primary target audience is responding less and less to traditional art-based image ads focusing on femininity. This has particularly become the case post-COVID, where professional women are re-evaluating their lives, priorities and the place in the world. We need an ad campaign that speaks to the elements of life that are emerging as priorities in a professional woman's life. Our brand's scents range from subtle floral, to spicy, to fruity, to vibrant and woody: something for everyone and every time – so this is the one and only perfume any young, professional woman will need.

Target audience

Professional females 25-35 who wear a perfume as a part of their identity: expressing their confidence, intelligence, strength and individuality to both themselves and those around them. This is a departure from them perceiving perfume as something to help them appear more feminine and more appealing to others. Our targets lead busy, stressful and complicated lives and our perfume is there with them to reinforce their personal, individual identity.

Proposition

Always there for you in this crazy world.

Substantiation for the proposition

- Our sense of smell is incredibly powerful in influencing our perceptions and feelings – particularly about others – so our perfume is a useful ally in an uncertain world
- Wearing a personally satisfying scent makes us feel more confident because we know it has a positive effect on those around us – so our perfume can be an important source of personal confidence
- Being more confident – particularly in challenging or stressful situations, is incredibly important to our self-esteem and positive mental health overall.
- Our brand's scents are so varied and versatile that they are suitable for any occasion – from a flirty date, to a quiet night at home, to a busy day running errands, to a stressful presentation at work.

Personality of the ad

Confident, in control.

Mandatories

- The Armani Si logo
- The ad must tell/imply a story/situation/idea our audience can relate to and feels strongly about
- The ad must include – at minimum – a headline and an image.

Creative brief

Client
Room to Read
<https://www.roomtoread.org/>

Objective
Room to Read has always collected donations on a campaign by campaign basis. For the first time in Australia it is establishing forward direct debit facilities. Between August and December this year we want to secure $5,000 in forward month by month direct debits at an average of $30/month.

Challenge
The Australian market is crowded with great causes competing for limited donations. Our competition is well established in the minds and habits of supporters (Plan, Worldvision etc.) and we are little-known in this market. We need to give our audience a reason to put us ahead of so many other worthy charities, when they donate. That literacy is just as important to life, as food.

Target audience
Our audience typically donates to a cause they feel a personal affinity with, through a personal interest or experience or an experience through a friend or family member. Our audience want to make a tangible difference and so want to know the cause they are donating to can achieve important but tangible results. Our audience doesn't want to be overwhelmed so much by a need that they feel their donation won't make enough of a difference for them to bother in the first place.

Consumer insight
Have a household income of over $150,000, our audience benefits right now from an excellent school and university education. Their lifestyle, and personal and professional satisfaction has been enabled by the educational resources and opportunities we are trying to give others. But this educational and lifestyle privilege means it will be difficult for them to fully understand the important difference they can make to the lives and futures of children by helping with their literacy.

Proposition
Change their lives with literacy.

Substantiation for the proposition

- The ability to read unlocks many doors we in Australia take for granted: the ability to learn and gain a skill or profession that lifts people out of poverty, provides wider personal choices and creates better lifestyles. Literacy can literally have life and death consequences for a child.
- Creating literacy is the best known way of eliminating poverty. And over 1 billion people are there right now, hoping someone with the ability to help them, will help them.
- Room to Read provides communities – and individuals – with the complete infrastructure that makes literacy possible: from building libraries to stocking them with books, to training local teachers.
- Such a small donation is a very affordable way for an individual in a wealthy country like Australia to give to individuals and entire communities, something that not only leads to better lives but stops a child from living a terrible life.

Personality of the ad
The warm glow of knowing you've changed a person's life.

Mandatories
At least a headline and image as a minimum.
Use of at least one of: rhetoric, and/or semiotics, and/or mythology.

Creative Brief

Client: XXXX Control
<https://www.xxxx.com.au/>

Objective
Because of the wider social and community concerns about the negative impacts of alcohol we have developed a no alcohol version of XXXX, called XXXX Control. We need to convince our loyal full-alcohol XXXX drinkers to try this new 0% alcohol beer.

Challenge
Our traditional XXXX customers are proud, macho but pragmatic and down-to-earth Australian men aged 18-30. Particularly in the warmer parts of Australia, XXXX has become a central part of the social interactions for many and is regarded as more than just a beverage to quench their thirst – it is the social glue that is consumed by those part of a group of “mates”. Young males who feel they need to constantly prove their manhood to both their immediate male friends and their wider group of friends and family. Drinking XXXX full strength alcohol beer is an important part of this male identity. Some will see a reduction in alcohol levels to 0% as a reduction in this proud identity but we need to capture this important part of the 0% alcohol market without losing our brand meaning.

The proposition
The beer that makes you a real man

Truths

- Our new non-alcohol process creates a beer just as flavoursome and thirst quenching as the original full-strength alcoholic beer
- A large section of young males is increasingly becoming concerned that excessive consumption of alcohol is bad for their social image (getting drunk and losing control is looked down upon by women and increasingly other men)
- Not getting drunk while still enjoying a beer allows men to do and achieve more of the other things important to their lives; to be seen as a more modern version of being “a real man”
- The identity of the hard drinking Aussie male is still popular but this needs to change.

Audience
18-30 year old males. Beer is their main beverage during the warmer months between September and April. The bitter flavour quenches thirst better than other beverages, but the drinking of beer itself is a social ritual: it is an activity that brings people together. Our audience wants to be associated with a beer that represents their down-to-earth but strongly male personality.

Personality of the ad
Clever, cheeky, fun.

Mandatories

- Develop a print ad
- Must include an image and a headline
- Must reflect the “personality” requirement noted above so it resonates with young men

Creative Brief

Client: Discord

<https://discord.com/>

Objective

Only 13% of Australians use our Discord social platform, compared to 78% using Facebook, 62% using Instagram, 50% using YouTube, 45% using WhatsApp, and 40% using TikTok. We want to increase Discord use to 30% within 12 months.

Challenge/opportunity

While Discord was designed for a wide range of audiences to create communities ranging from gamers to businesses, with useful text, image, video and audio communications functions, it was only launched in 2015 and so has needed time to catch up to the popularity of earlier established platforms. And, compared to most of the other platforms such as YouTube, Instagram and TikTok, it does not rely on the historically more enticing passive downloading of content (doomscrolling) but is rather a more pro-active platform for all in collaboratively building online communities. However, we believe the growing awareness of, and alarm at the isolating and socially damaging nature of the currently popular but passive social platforms is revealing the value of a more collaborative community building platform like Discord. Now is the time for Discord to launch into the mainstream of social platforms.

The proposition

Re-connect with life, online.

Truths

- Discord allows members to use just the one platform for any and all multiplayer games they and their friends play, so is a convenient online meeting place for all
- Discord allows the creation of channels for like-minded individuals on any subject, to engage and share content on that subject, enabling them to find, join and benefit from participation in those channel communities.
- Discord allows real-world friend groups to more conveniently connect online any time and any place and share content anywhere from text to images to video and voice, solidifying those friendships
- Discord functionalities allow friends and colleagues to creatively collaborate by both sharing material and building creative material together, any time, any place, easily – enriching their lives

Audience

We want to particularly target 16–30-year-old Australians. This cohort in particular are aware of the isolating social problems of social media platforms and we believe will see the community-building focus of Discord as most valuable.

Personality of the ad

Genuine, inviting, fun.

Mandatories

- Develop a print ad that must include at least an image and a headline.

Discord

My conceptual idea is using Discord to re-connect our life, just like what AED do to patient. Our target audiences may feel surprising and be unfamiliar with the combination between AED and Discord. The usage of source analogues and target analogues makes my ad work because AED can save people's lives anytime and anywhere just like the description of the Discoed in the brief. Also, I consider and use the title "Active Existence with Discord" forms the acronym AED, intentionally linking tightly the concept and effect of AED with Discord to enhance audiences recognition and engagement through a playful association.

